

“I am a radiation therapist at the McGlinn Cancer Institute at Phoenixville Hospital. I enjoy being outside, and hiking is one of my favorite outdoor activities. I find time to hike almost everywhere I go. On a beautiful Autumn Day, I was meandering through Madame Sherri Woods in New Hampshire, near the border of Vermont. Even though the trails were still a bit muddy due to an extremely rainy season, I took a path less travelled and stumbled upon this pond with a mirror image of the trees against its farthest edge. After marveling at this beautiful view, I walked away, wondering if a photograph would do it justice. I went back and snapped a picture. But when I printed it, the colors were lacking. I used colored pencils to add highlights of color throughout the image, giving it life.” - Tracey McCowen R.T. (R)(T)
